> The beneficiaries of this program are those identified to be the 'poorest of the poor' like the senior citizens, persons with disabilities, single parents, and those who lost their incomes due to the pandemic, among others.

It was learned that for this especial cash giving, the provincial government of Eastern Samar made use of its savings.

Evardone said that excluded for this financial assistance initiated by the provincial government are those who already received their SAP, members of the 4Ps (Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino Program), and assistance being extended by other government agencies like the Department of Labor and Employment.

However, barangay tanods and barangay health workers stand to receive an additional P500 on top of the P1,500 assistance that they are to receive from the government.

The barangay nutrition scholars who received P1,200 earlier are to receive an additional P800.

Online learning

n response to the threat of COVID-19 to the health conditions of people comprising the academic community, and in compliance with quarantine and lockdown protocols implemented by the government, the Department of Education (DepEd) has been toying with the idea of resorting to online teaching-learning activities instead of requiring teachers and students to conduct classroom sessions that could aggravate likely mass infections.

While such scheme is commendable indeed as a wise alternative, it has accompanying problems that are beyond our control. In fact, these drawbacks are quite many. Just one of which could already render the entire process ineffective, and could thus affect the desired results. These are problems that, this early, should merit consideration among education authorities so that they would be properly addressed, or other alternatives could be opted.

As we can see, online learning is only suitable for urban centers, among well off families, and so on. But in rural areas, the absence of electricity is already a big problem. This could be remedied only with the use of, say, car batteries with solar panels, which people hardly own. Here, where pupils could hardly afford to buy notebooks and pencils, we cannot expect them to own gadgets like cellphones and laptops for use online. Even if they have, there being no internet signal becomes a problem.

In fact, having an internet signal is not a guarantee of success since, in most places, the signal is extremely slow. You have to wait for eternity before a command takes effect. This wastes a lot of time, a cause for a learner to be left behind in an online interactions or activities. And what about the ignorance of old teachers in using hi-tech gadgets and online applications? You see, making them undergo trainings can hardly change the fact that, when it comes to using hi-tech gadgetry, ancient teachers are

All these are handicaps that DepEd should consider before institutionalizing online schemes. We cannot afford to ignore these or else, many students would not be able to catch up with the lessons. Indeed, these are complicated matters, but education specialists can untangle all this. We just hope that, in the proposed resolutions, no one among the key players of the academe will be disadvantaged. Priority and special considerations must zero in, if need be, on the learners. After all, they are the objects of education.

Marital clash

I had a quarrel this morning with my wife.

I should not tell you this, it being a private, marital issue; but I just can't help it. Anyway, we seldom quarrel because, though she is ill-tempered and is frequently agitated to put up a fight, I do not engage, rather opting to stay calm and quiet.

This morning, though, my anger soared. I found myself ready to rumble. Not to win an argument for my sheer pleasure, nor to assert parts, worn items, and cara personal bias, or to prove ried objects that may have her wrong. It was to protest against an inappropriate act that could put our family at risk. In short, it was to fight for our safety and protection in the house.

You see, for months now, we have been carefully guarding ourselves against the onslaught of this unseen yet dreadful enemy—the coronavirus. I don't know how many bottles of alcohol and sanitizers we have consumed just to disinfect our hands, gadgets, and other items that had been exposed to the outside world. Plenty of soaps had been consumed as well, and water, too, in washing body from potential sources. When we go somewhere, I keep reminding them to strictly observe physical distancing, non-touching of the face, proper wearing of face disinfecting of mask, hands with alcohol after touching coins, money bills, and public handles like doorknobs or railings. Just to make sure we get rid of this despicable virus. Not giving it any place in our daily routines and appointments.

OPINION

Chill it out, take it slow

THE expressions are part of the lyrics of a pop rock song entitled, Best of both worlds, as performed by Miley Cyrus. It talks of a small town girl who enjoys privacy and the status of an ordinary girl in her school but is a big-time phenom when performing on stage because of her extraordinary talent. She's just cool about that condition.

The expressions can also be applied to what our attitude should be in these times of uncertainty and suspense due to this Covid19 pandemic. We are quite aware that we are thrown into an ocean of mysteries and unknowns, and we are trying our best just to coast along if only to survive with a certain level of ease and comfort. As long as we continue to pray and be vigilant, I believe such attitude is the right thing to have.

Let's be careful when we get carried away by our emotions, usually of fear and anxiety that often are manifestations of our over-reaction to what we have now. Let's just take it easy, and as the song puts it, let's just "chill it out, take it slow." Otherwise, things would just be worse for us.

Thus, let's not be rash in our thoughts, words and deeds in reacting to what we are having now. Let's restrain ourselves from giving in to ideas and pieces of information that are thrown to us in abundance, thanks but no thanks to our modern communication technologies.

By now we should already be quite familiar with what are known as fake news. We should be properly guarded against them. They can come from differ-

We know that there are people out there who, wittingly or unwittingly, are too focused on pushing their own agenda without due regard to other views. This usually happens with those with a political agenda. And there are people who simply come out with wild, completely baseless assertions, relying more on their biases and prejudices—yes, even religious biases.

But before all that, we cannot deny that there are things that still are up in the air as to their veracity. Like whether the virus is manmade or is something natural, whether it came from China or wherever, whether lockdown, ecq, gcq are the right thing to do, whether we have a real pandemic or a 'plandemic,' etc.

Of course, we should follow the exchanges of views, but let's not be rash in making judgments. What we should not forget is that God is always in control of everything, and that while we have to do our part, we neither should worry too much nor over-react to the developments of this crisis.

Whether we end up right or wrong in our views or positions about these issues is not as important as whether we are with God or not in living out these trying times. Yes, we should try our best to get to the bottom of these issues, but we should never leave God behind. He is in the middle of all this, and the way we react to it would show how we are relating ourselves with God.

So, more than anything else, what is always needed are prayers, sacrifices, works of mercy and all the other spiritual and supernatural means that are still made available to us.

We should try our best to live and act in solidarity with others, which does not mean that we all have a uniform way of doing things. Solidarity involves the variety of the subsidiary ways to serve the common good. Let's do what we can to help, and let's do it in coordination with everyone else.

So, let's just chill it out, take it slow. No need to be tense. We have to learn to smile and ride out this storm. This one will also pass, just like the previous one, though we are still held in suspense at the moment.

Remdesivir, the new anti-COVID drug

In the United States and many other countries, this is the so-called "Wonder Drug" versus the dreaded Coronavirus that many doctors, medical experts are now openly talking about!

GILEAD SCIENC-ES, INC. (pronounced Gil'yad) of Foster City in California, USA, announced topline positive results from their 5-day and 10-day dosing durations of hospitalized patients with severe manifestations of COVID-19 disease.

No less than Dr. Anthony Fauci, the top Infectious Disease Expert in the United States, and Dr. Stephen Hahn, of the US Food & Drug Administration commented positively on these results

So what does this mean? - That it is just a question of time - several weeks or a bit more, we'd have the honest-to-goodness cure of this dreaded Coronavi-

Now, at this stage, let me divert your kind attention to an Article I wrote, which could not be published in my column in this newspaper, because of ECQ, & which I posted in my facebook last 5 April 2020, with the

30th JUNE SIG-NALS CORONAVIRUS'

Televisions & newspapers all over the world announced that an Anti-Coronavirus Vaccine is already being developed and safety-tested; and now undergoing the usual process of TOA (Tests on Animals or 'guinea pigs'); TOCP (Tests on Covid-19 Patients), and when officially proclaimed successful, the MOBV (Manufacture of Billions of Vaccines) and of course, the eventual sales and distribution of the Vaccine to countries affected.

Many International Pharmaceutical Industries even announced last March 21st that "they expect to roll-out Anti-Coronavirus vaccines in several months pa."

Now, let me explain why I believe in this 2nd title - the June 30th theory. The next paragraph is a product of my research - this narrative (with some clarifying insertions) was taken from the Santo Niño de Tacloban facebook. You dear readers can form your own connection!

"In 1888, the original image of the Child Jesus, known as the "El Capitan", was brought to Manila for a facelift and a change of its vestments in preparation for its forthcoming feast day. On its return trip to Tacloban on-board the steamship "Luzon", the image was packed in a crate together with some heavy bronze 'Candelabras''.

"The Santo Niño, however, did not reach its destination as the ship caught fire off the coast of the Mindoro & Romblon provinces. In the midst of the confusion, the crate containing the image of the Santo Niño was thrown overboard and, for some time was believed to be lost at sea.

"A year after the incident, the devotees and residents of Tacloban were at the brink of giving up all hope of ever seeing their beloved Santo Niño again; and the feast day of the Holy Child came and went without any celebration.

"Adding to this despair was a cholera epidemic that engulfed Tacloban. The deadly plague claimed many lives and, almost every night, many cholera victims were loaded into a "caromata" or two-wheeled carriage drawn by a carabao, to be buried in common

"At the height of the epidemic, the then Leyte Governor received a letter from Jose Gil de Avalle, Military Governor of Mindoro, stating that a crate labeled "Santo Niño Han Tacloban' was spotted at sea by one of his Barrio Lieutenants.

"The crate was seen afloat with a boy standing on its top and, to the disbelief of the natives of Mindoro, it remained afloat despite its heavy load of bronze Candelabras.

"The Hermanidad promptly organized and dispatched a team of nine volunteers to retrieve the image. This columnist's paternal grandfather, Eduardo "Lolo" Daydo" Quintero, was one of the nine volunteers who traveled to Mindoro to fetch the miraculous Santo Niño.

(Going back to this narrative...) "News of the recovery and the beloved Santo Niño's expected arrival spread like wild fire. Devotees and residents, including those struck with the plague; came canes, crutches, stretchers and ham-known as labasero, passed by our house, shouting out invitations for people to come out and buy his goods. At the mention of crab, masag in the local tongue, my wife quickly got out, without a mask on as we do not wear it in and outside our house.

There with the vendor outside, they started negotiating about the price and all, the vendor explaining with his usual sales talk, just a few inches away from my wife, who was now scanning the crabs in the container placed inside the pedicab that the vendor was driving. What flared me up was that, this vendor had no mask at all, his mouth and nose just bare. He could have been raining my wife's face with droplets of saliva coming from his big, talkative mouth. Both of them, then, violated the rule on social distancing.

"Do wear a mask," I shouted to my wife from our front window. "Keep your distance!" My wife heard these, giving me a furtive glance, but she just ignored my instructions, justifying her action when she got inside that the vendor is familiar to her.

"So what if he looks familiar?" I argued. "Do you know what places he goes to, and the many people he gets in touch with? What if they are just asymptomatic but are carriers of the virus for real?" All this I expressed in anger while thinking of our kids that we have been trying to protect all these months.

COVID-19 testing personnel in Eastern Visayas undergo training

NEWS

A team of nine medical technologists and one pathologist from the region arrived in Cebu City on Sunday, May 3, for a three-day proficiency training, as the region bid for its first testing center for coronavirus diseases (COVID-19).

The 10- member's team consisted of a pathologist and nine medical technol-

The COVID-19 proficiency training of the personnel is stage 3 of the five steps needed before the full scale implementation of the molecular laboratory set up at the old Eastern Visayas Regional Medical Center (EVRMC) along Magsaysay Boulevard, this city.

The said proposed testing center already passed validation stage in the laboratory accreditation steps of the Research Institute for Tropical Medicine (RITM) in Mandaluyong City.

The Office of the Presidential Assistant for the Visayas(OPAV), who facilitated the trip and accommodation of COVID-19 testing personnel, said the team will have their training at the Vicente Sotto Memorial Medical Center (VSMMC) and Department of Health (DOH)-7 COVID Testing

"After the training, stage 4 or proficiency testing will be done. The PCR testing of samples from Region 8 is currently being done at VSMMC but once EVRMC will be granted Stage 5 accreditation by RITM, it will now be running its own PCR testing for the entire region," the Cebu Citybased OPAV said.

The RT Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) machine, a cutting-edge diagnostic technology machine used for COVID-19 testing, was already installed at the proposed laboratory

The P2.7 million worth RT-PCR machine was reportedly purchased out from the personal funds of Leyte Rep. Ferdinand Martin Romualdez.

Eastern Visayas-based Tingog party-list, through Representative Yedda Marie Romualdez, also paid for the renovation and retrofitting of the proposed COVID-19 testing center, which costs about a million coming from their internal funds.
